

UK 1: Mother, while we saw each other yesterday, what happened and what are you going to show them now? /as printed/

UK 2: This is what I'm going to say: we were called down /and told that/ the United Nations would come, they would register us, and that you would travel somewhere with us. We left, and four or five people stayed here. My husband and this woman's husband, he stayed, he was sleeping. Mine stayed tending the cows. And when we arrived, everything was on fire here. We came back from down there where we had waited for UNPROFOR. Another army passed. We don't know who it was, or what it was. The army passed us...

UK 1: Good, stop, stop. Once, like this, this woman, then you go into the house and we will go with you. What happened yesterday when we didn't see each other, yesterday?

UK 2: What happened? We found the houses all on fire. When we arrived, we found all houses on fire. And we rushed, rushed over here to find our husbands dead. And I found mine with the cows, and two cows were dead and my husband was dead. But old woman wasn't there. The old woman burnt in the house. She was in bed ill, burnt. This woman, too, she wasn't here, this woman wasn't here, she came, found the man dead in the house. Yes, this one here. Come on, woman, upstairs.

UK 1: Yes, from here. Go ahead, come here and show us. There is the husband, this is the woman.

UK 2: Here, this is the woman, this is her husband. He was sleeping here, he was sick.

UK 1: Just a moment, from here, you stand here, and you do this. You stand here like this. All right.

UK 2: Here, let me show you. This woman wasn't here. Her husband is ill. He was in bed. When we arrived, we found him dead. Well, that's what I can tell you. (unclear). He can't hear, /he's/ deaf.

UK 1: How did you, how did you, I mean, did they meet? /as printed/

UK 2: Yes, you see, here, do you see this. He was executed, executed, you see, in the head. (unclear) it's been five years that he has been ill (unclear).

UK 1: What are you, we've just gone ... we've just seen the husband of this woman.

What are you going to show us now?

UK 3: From my husband, you mean?

UK 1: What was, and what happened. You must say everything. What are you going to show? What happened? /as printed/

UK 3: What happened? He was tending the cows. Back there.

UK 1: But you have to say who. My husband, start with my husband; Yesterday, I came back and my husband ...

UK 3: My husband tended the cows here. I arrived, I went down to register with UNPROFOR to go with you. And when we got back everything here went up in flames, the whole of Grubori. I went to look for my husband and I found two of my cows dead and two dogs. And I found my man, dead. And there are another two or three who we didn't find anywhere. Now, whether they burnt, they're not my people, but here from the neighbourhood. There are three more and we don't know what happened to them. And what we found, these two dead people, we found them. And what am I to do now? Are you going to bury him? Who is going to bury him, my husband? We don't have anybody to do the burial. What can I say?
